RAFFLE AND LOTTERY OFFENSES DEPLORED

Establishment of raffle and operation of lotteries in the form of gift merchandise, automobiles, cash and other prize systems, were hit by grand jury action Tuesday when the body adjourned requesting co-operation to stamp out all forms of raffle and lottery and asked officers to enforce the law.

The section of the grand jury report bearing on this matter is as follows and signed by Lon Hudson, foreman and J. O. Hughes, secretary:

"Complaint has been made to the grand jury from all parts of the county of violations of our State laws prohibiting the operation of a lottery and the establishment of a raffle and we respectfully call attention of the public and of the officers to the following portion of our peral statute: 'If any person shall establish a lottery or dispose of any estate, real or personal by lottery, he shall not be fined less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars.' And further providing that the sale, offer for sale or keeping for sale of a lottery ticket shall be fined not less than ten nor more than fifty dollars. A lottery is any scheme for the distribution of prizes by chance, whether by drawing or otherwise. We respectfully request the co-operation of the citizenship of the county in ending this type of law violation."

OFFICER O'DAY looked puzzled when a sleek town car slid to a stop in front of the Martin Jewelry company and the chauffeur sat woodenly indifferent while the car's other occupant fumbled with the door handle. Officer O'Day took huge steps across the sidewalk to open the door himself.

An attractive young woman met his glance with startled eyes and a quick flush.

"Thank you so much," she murmured.

The store was deserted except for Mr. Martin and the bookkeeper bent over a ledger. Mr. Martin hurried forward to wait upon the woman.

"I'd like to see some diamond rings," she said.

Mr. Martin glanced at the woman curiously. So many of his patrons nowadays were likely to wear just slightly shabby clothes. He noticed that this customer's fashionable tan coat and hat looked new, and expensive. Even the matching parasol with its carved handle appeared unused. Whereupon Mr. Martin placed his most expensive stock of diamonds on the counter.

A happy smile lit up the woman's face as she selected a ring with perhaps the largest stone of the display. She tried it on.

"You know," she confided in a husky voice, "I made some money, a wise investment, and I decided I'd earned a diamond."

"An excellent idea; excellent," Mr. Martin said, trying to appear nonchalant. She raised her hand to see the diamond closely. At that instant the loop of the parasol slid off her arm and it hit the floor with a muffled thud. Quickly the woman bent to retrieve it.

"These other rings," she said, "I wonder if I might care for one of them."

A worried frown came to Mr. Martin's face. He wanted desperately to sell the large diamond. With anxious eyes he watched her finger the less expensive diamonds one after another. Mr. Martin would have been more concerned had he been able to see the other side of the counter.

Slowly, very carefully, the woman's left hand slid down the handle of her parasol, down to the framework, and dropped the big diamond among the folds.

The instant that it dropped the woman slid the other rings into a small pile.

"After all," she said, with a straightforward smile, "I don't know which I like best." She pulled on her gloves. "I'll return in an hour or two, when I have decided."

That had been almost too easy, she thought. There had been a question in her mind whether she could place the diamonds in a pile. But now—five more precious minutes. She walked slowly a few feet. Confidence now, nothing could go wrong. Jim out there, taut, ready to speed away.

Mr. Martin kept pace with her on his side of the counter.

The woman stopped short when she saw a display of beaded bags. "Oh, aren't they adorable?" Instantly Mr. Martin was placing a half dozen on the counter.

Glancing at her tiny jeweled wrist watch the woman said doubtfully, "I really shouldn't." Jim out there in the car would be fuming with nervousness. They had planned that she would take no longer than fifteen minutes. The motor would be running, they would drive quickly a few blocks into a certain garage. Their clothing was laid out. She knew too that even as they donned the clothes that would so change their appearance, the men in the garage would be rushing through the paint job that would make the big car unrecognizable.

But what of five minutes and Jim's uneasiness, the woman thought contemptuously. Leisurely she opened the bags, compared them. There was one, a rich dark one that she seemed to prefer. When she turned away from the counter it lay at the bottom of her parasol.

She heard herself murmur things—no, not today after all. Once more she glanced at her watch. Slightly more than five minutes had elapsed while she had examined the bags. Her heart beat a little faster.

But still she talked pleasantly to Mr. Martin as she walked to the door, and then, involuntarily, she took a deep breath.

"Nice little rain," Mr. Martin said behind her.

Nice little rain!

She hesitated with the door partly open when Officer O'Day came into view. He was smiling broadly. "Just an April shower, only started five minutes ago," he said and then reached for her parasol. "Allow me—"

"No, oh, no," the woman said and her voice sounded strangely excited. "It doesn't work," she explained quickly.

Patrick O'Day would never have it known that as little a thing as a lady's parasol ever refused to yield to him.

"Oh, I can fix it," he said confidently and pulled the parasol from the woman's conclusive grip.

With nightmarish clarity, the woman beheld several scenes the next instant: Patrick O'Day raising the parasol, peering at it. Then the dull thud of a beaded bag as it hit the sidewalk and the lighter tinkle of a diamond ring as it bounded into the gutter. That amazed expression on the officer's face; Mr. Martin yelling hoarsely and Jim, the rat, pulling away from the curb, roaring down the street, alone!

Inquest Held In Car Crash

An inquest was held in the death of Mrs. Hazel Hess Griffin, 21, at the Hess home on Sunday afternoon by Justice of Peace Womack Brashers. A verdict of accidental death by automobile was rendered.

Mrs. Griffin had a broken neck, crushed skull and other bodily injuries, which she received on Saturday night when the car in which she was riding with five others, left the highway about a mile and a half west of Cameron, went into a ditch and hit an embankment.

Oscar Storey, driver of the car, is still in a critical condition at the Cameron Hospital. He suffered internal injuries besides head wounds, a broken arm and an injured shoulder blade. His daughter, Mrs. Bernice Wallace, who was also in the car, received a head wound and 76 stitches had to be taken.

Richard Hefley is suffering from a severe right eye wound, and Miss Nora Davis from a deep cut on the right leg which reached the bone.

Franklin McCown received only minor bruises and cuts and was able to be up in the morning. The other four are still in the hospital.

After considerable discussions the meeting adjourned to meet again on April 18 with Mrs. Perry Strickler. The hostess then served refreshments.

"PLANNING one of these public weddings is one thing," declared A. H. Hinkler, chairman of the arrangements committee of the Bayview Charity circus, "but putting the fool thing over seems to be an entirely different proposition!"

"Too proud!" exploded Josephus Braun. "After all that bunch of prizes we've offered!"

"Surely," suggested Adolphus Weeks, "we shall find a couple somewhere who will agree to be married."

A. H. Hinkler waved his arms wildly. "Somewhere!" he shouted. "But where? Do you realize, man, that the wedding is advertised for tonight?"

"And that we've practically crawled all over that platform on our hands and knees at every performance begging—literally begging—some young couple—any young couple—to please step forward and be married so that we can give them fifty dollars in cash and other junk!" added Josephus Braun quite at the top of his lungs.

"Well," said little Mr. Weeks, softly, placatingly, "it isn't our fault if we receive no response. We have the prizes ready. We have, as you say, pleaded. Surely—"

"Surely," mocked A. H. Hinkler, "they won't expect a wedding when we've placarded the whole city with promises that there will be one! Oh, no!"

"Well," growled Josephus Braun, "we can keep trying. I suppose."

One by one, the committee had taken turns pleading, offering prizes, and beaming hopefully at the vast throng attending the circus. Sometimes there would be a nibble, but never a real bite! Messrs. Hinkler, Braun and Weeks had struggled, perspired, cursed and raged.

Josephus Braun, chosen by the committee to make the final plea because of his deep booming voice, stood that evening and beamed. He began by enumerating the prizes. He dwelt, touchingly, on the interest all these people would take in the young couple to be married here. It was just like a big happy family, he said. Still no response. The crowd sat like a great silent, breathing mass, waiting. Josephus Braun left the ring and consulted his brother committeemen.

"Now, listen, ladies and gentlemen," he beamed upon his return. "The committee will double—ab-so-lute-ly double—the cash prize if a couple will walk up here within the next three minutes and allow themselves to be married. Just three minutes, ladies and gentlemen!" He took out his elaborate watch and marked the time.

Halfway around the auditorium a young couple rose, hesitatingly, whispering. The girl sank into her seat again, but not before Josephus Braun had spotted her.

"Come right along!" he invited cordially, waving the watch. "Right this way! There isn't much time!"

The young man assisted the hesitant girl to her feet, and led her, trembling, to the ring. Triumphantly, Josephus Braun bore his charges away. Flurry. Excitement.

Who were they? wondered the crowd. No one seemed to know. Well, it didn't really matter. They were young—and in love. Anyone could see that.

A breathless hush. The circus band began to play Lohengrin, a little blaringly. Attendants, drafted from the circus performers, and transformed by the magic of quick change appeared, taking their places with quiet dignity.

And then the bride with a great bouquet of roses, still wearing her little dark suit, but very lovely! Her cheeks were deeply pink, and she was nervous and a little afraid, but there was a soft, tremulous beauty about her that the crowd sensed and approved. A little dark-eyed bride, trembling! They took her to their hearts and loved her, and smiled at her, and even wept over her, a little. It didn't matter about the groom. Just a good-looking young man, a little shabby.

The wedding went on. The gifts were presented. Josephus Braun beamed. The crowd beamed. The bridegroom beamed. And the little bride blushed and smiled.

The wedding was over. The crowd sighed a little regretfully, and the circus went on—while in the committee room the bridegroom bargained with the committee, taking some of the prizes and trading others for cash. At last, with their little rattlesnake car stacked high with booty, the young couple drove away, alone, into the night.

And then a quiet roadway, ribboning into the deeper shadows of the velvety night.

"Tom," said the little bride, snuggling against his broad dark shoulder, "do you think it was all right?"

"Sure," said Tom, slipping his arm around her.

"I was awful scared," she said, trembling a little in remembrance. "I thought maybe they'd arrest us—or something—if they knew!"

"They didn't make any rules about it," said Tom, reasonably. "They just said they wanted a couple to get married!"

"It's wonderful," sighed the girl. "With all that money and all these prizes we can take baby from Aunt Mary and get us a room and live together 'til you get a job."

"Sure," said Tom.

The little car rattled happily on.

"And Tom—"

"Yes?"

"It was kind of beautiful, wasn't it—getting married all over again after three years?"

CHAS. F. ASHCROFT

An urgent appeal to all members to attend the ninth annual convention of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce Centennial Convention in Henderson April 21-23 has been voiced by Chas. F. Ashcroft, Sulphur Springs, president of the regional organization. "Reports from Henderson indicate that this will be, undoubtedly, one of the best gatherings our organization has ever had. I know Henderson is making plans to entertain a big crowd. Let's not disappoint them," said Mr. Ashcroft, who is pictured in his centennial costume which he will wear at the convention.

way will be extended from Corpus Christi to Brownsville.

Attending the meeting from Cameron: Mr. Henderson, J. L. Barmore, B. F. Reichert, George Banzhaf, Judge Jeff T. Kemp and W. F. Paden. From Rockdale W. E. Gaither, M. N. Strickler and E. A. Camp.

Mr. Henderson said that all counties from Dallas to Corpus Christi were represented.

A pleasure of the trip was an invitation to the Fair grounds in La Grange where a barbecue dinner was served to all delegates. From there they went to Monument Hill where lie the bodies of Dawson's men, a heroic band of Texans who set out in pursuit of the Mexican army. Some were captured and slain.

The captured men were taken to Mexico. In later years the bones of the men were brought back and buried beneath an imposing monument of Texas granite. The bones of Captain Ewing Cameron were never found. He was killed in Mexico. His name, however, appears on the monument. Cameron is named for the gallant soldier.

Leading to the monument is the shortest designated highway in the world. It is one mile in length.

Ben F. Hairgret, editor of the La Grange Journal delivered an address to the delegates.

Mr. Meyer has retired as president of the highway association and has been succeeded by Dr. Hertell of Giddings.

Believing fundamentally in religious freedom and the thorough separation of church and state as the best method of obtaining so great a boon to mankind, we are often equally concerned lest zealous religious leaders overstep the line that should define correct activity and thus become as much the foe of the religious freedom as short sighted governmental officials who attempt by political action to destroy religion.

Lowly Weasel Furnishes

Rich Ermine of Royalty

It is the lowly weasel that furnishes the ermine of royalty and this member of the rodent family is common, writes an authority in the Detroit News.

The white fur is worn only by those members of the weasel family living in the northern part of the country where heavy snows are experienced, and then only in the winter time. During the winter months the fur of the northern weasel is all white excepting for a tip of black on the tail; but the weasels living in warmer climates, and the northern weasels in summer time, are commonly brown above and of a yellowish hue on the under parts of their bodies.

The weasel is probably the most bloodthirsty killer among all the smaller members of the animal kingdom. It is exceedingly lithe and agile and successfully attacks rabbits and other game animals many times its size. Loose in a chicken yard or any other place where prey is abundant, the weasel will kill much more than it possibly can eat. Many times it does not eat the flesh of its victims at all but contents itself with sucking some of their blood.

In some parts of the country the weasel is looked upon as beneficial because it feeds largely upon mice and other undesirable rodents; but any where near the farmer's chicken yard it is a bad actor and even in the open fields and woods away from cultivated areas it is doubtful if the good it does in destroying rodent pests can counterbalance the havoc it works among bird and small game animal life.

Many Uses for Old Bones

Thrown Away Every Year

The millions of bones that are thrown away every year help to make a flourishing industry. Their by-products and uses are practically endless and there is no waste.

Bones go through many stages. First they are boiled until all the fat is extracted; this is made into glycerine and certain types of lubricants. Skin and marrow bones are used for making handles. The rest are ground into fine powder in vast mills and have an infinite number of uses. A certain amount of this powder is used to make bone-manure and bone-meal for farmers. It is extremely valuable. Sugar, salt, and other refineries utilize bones in some of their refining processes. Bones are also used for case-hardening cast steel.

The worst part of old bones is their powerful and penetrating odor, which, strange to say, is not in the least harmful. Asthmatics and those suffering with lung trouble often find relief when working in such an atmosphere.—Montreal Herald.

Shepherd Dies

Trying to Aid Dog

Polson, Mont.—The traditional love of the shepherd for his dog was demonstrated here when Jim Butler laid down his life for his inseparable companion might live. Butler, with two companions, was cutting logs for a sheep pen. His dog walked into the path of the falling tree. The herder sprang to the animal's rescue and was struck and killed.

PAINT BUGLER AND THROW HIM IN POOL

His Reveille Call Resented by Fellow Workers.

Chicago.—Robert J. Vanasek does not like to be painted green.

As a matter of fact, he has a prejudice against being painted blue or any other color; but green was the hue over which he brooded as he sat in his bunk sponging himself off with a turpentine-soaked cloth.

Mr. Vanasek has the misfortune to be bugler of the 607th company of the Civilian Conservation corps, encamped near Harms road and Glenview road. Early one evening Mr. Vanasek was strolling about the camp, thinking what a great thing outdoor life can be. Being painted green never entered his head.

He did not know that a dozen or so members of company 607 were bitter against him; that they were thinking about the "Ta-ta-ta" of his bugle waking them up from sound sleeps.

Consequently it was a great surprise to Mr. Vanasek when, on the outskirts of the camp, a number of indignant CCCers laid violent hands upon him and dragged him away into the woods.

Despite Mr. Vanasek's plaintive cries he was stripped of his clothing, with the exception of his shoes and socks. The most artistic of his captors then wielded brushes saturated in green paint.

Presently Mr. Vanasek was a sight to behold. He did not admire his new paint job and did not even want to be simonized.

So the CCC boys threw him into a nearby pond and went away.

"Ungrateful" about summed up their attitude.

But Mr. Vanasek had recognized a good many of his assailants and reported to his commanding officer. The result was that eight of the CCC workers languished in the jail house of the county highway police at Morton Grove.

Officials of the camp opined that no charges would be pressed, but that the culprits would be discharged and sent home.

Meanwhile Mr. Vanasek wielded his turpentine cloth.

COMETS BEAT KNIGHT TEAM HERE SUNDAY

Pilot Walker's 1935 edition of Comets made their debut at Lawless Green field Sunday and took the big end of the score from the Knights of Columbus under Rudolph Richter. It was the annual game between the Comets and Knights. The score was 9 to 6. The Comets showed real strength and Manager Walker appears to have gotten well into his training period. The Knights made a courageous effort and showed the brand of baseball that will take them far into the running in the coming league race.

Schottle for the Comets was effective. In their opening at bat the Comets made three runs. In the third inning Knights made their first run. The Comets came back to gain four more runs in the fourth and in the fifth and sixth the Knights were coming along and made two more. Against Heitman who had displaced Schottle for the Comets the Knights ran up a batting average. Then Walker sent Peel to relieve Heitman and the threat was stopped. The score was 7 to six but the Comets came back under Peel and held the Knights scoreless and made two more runs in the ninth inning.

GEORGIE BLAKE was seeing Mabel Porter home from a Young People's Dramatic club rehearsal of "The Old Red Mill." His wreck of a car—the Iron Horse—shuddered as its racing motor split the quiet winter evening with anguished roars. They were parked before Mabel's house.

"Well, personally," Georgie was saying, "I can't see this Mortimer Jenks with a telescope."

"You couldn't," Mabel answered with a tinge of scorn. "Mortimer is a finished actor."

"Finished is right," Georgie growled. "He's terrible." The Iron Horse roared at the night as Georgie nursed the throttle.

"Who's he, I'd like to know, to get the best part in the whole show?" "Mortimer is a true Thelapian," Mabel retorted with dignity. "He's a born actor, and he attends an exclusive prep-school. But you should kick; you have one of the best parts."

"Sure," Georgie cried cynically. "I should kick. Do I get a chance to make love to you? Only twice and I get slapped both times. And by the way, when you start slapping, go easy. And remember this is a play and don't take those love scenes with this Mortimer so serious."

A light appeared in an upper window of Mabel's house, a signal which she quickly observed.

"Well, good-night, Georgie," she said with sweet womanly patience. "You mustn't be silly about all this."

"Silly!" Georgie yelled. "And you makin' love with a big sissy as I!"

Mabel stamped her foot. "Georgie Blake," she shouted. "I'll make love when and where and with whom I like!"

"Mabel!"

A heavy masculine voice cleaved the night air. The moonlight gleamed on Mr. Porter's bald head in the upper window. "Mabel, send that idiot home and come in the house. It's after one o'clock."

"Yes, pater," Mabel called. There was a snort and the window slammed.

"Pater!" Georgie crowed. "Oh, dear! Dear Mortimer Jenks! Hey, Mabel, are you crazy?"

"Well, at least, he's refined," Mabel shrieked above the din.

"Sure he is," Georgie rejoined, "and when I swat him he'll be granulated!"

"Ha!" Mabel scorned, drawing her overcoat about her in such a manner that it could be nothing but an ermine wrap. The Iron Horse roared away down the street flapping its fenders. The neighbors turned thankfully in their beds and went to sleep.

The last week of rehearsals Georgie boiled in oil. It was apparent to him that Mabel was going far out of her way to make "The Old Red Mill" a success. It was hard enough watching his girl, or the girl he hoped was his, making love with a sissy on a stage, but when she let the sissy see her home. . . . Savagely Georgie planned revenge.

On the fateful night the town hall auditorium was packed to the doors. Mabel was lovely in a new gown and Mortimer Jenks hovered about her until Georgie's red hair stood on end.

The performance went successfully toward a sizzling third act. Mabel and Mortimer billed and cooed until Georgie was nearly bereft of his senses. Under the lash of his indignation he made his part so real the audience positively hated him and when Mortimer made his dramatic entrance to rescue Mabel from Georgie's clutches there was a shout of acclaim.

Silence settled on the house. Tense, the audience waited for the hero to settle the villain's hash. But although Georgie cringed before the triumphant and handsome Mortimer, he was gritting to himself, "I'll do it, by heck! I'll do it!"

Mortimer kissed Mabel and then advanced to Georgie. "Do you admit defeat?" he thundered with deserving insolence.

Every head turned toward Georgie. It was his cue to mutter, "Curse, never!" make an attempt to escape and be overpowered by Mortimer. Instead, his voice snarled to the farthest seat an exultant line that wasn't in the script.

"Come and get it, Lollypop!"

He shot a straight hard left to Mortimer's nose. He crossed with his right, but in his excitement and anxiety he missed by a foot. There was a howl from the audience. Mortimer Jenks was everywhere at once. Georgie did his best, but he was no match for all the fists he saw before him. A thousand stars rained across his vision and the curtain came down to thunderous applause.

Georgie changed over quickly and made an unobtrusive exit. He was lame and sore in a hundred places. His jaw hurt like fury.

"Georgie, you were grand!"

The moon was behind a cloud and Mabel stood there looking almost like Sarah Bernhardt offering gifts.

"Thanks," Georgie mumbled through bruised lips. "Come on and I'll see you home."

"No, thank you," Mabel spoke from the heights of her dramatic success. "Mortimer is seeing me home in his Strutz Eight."

"What?"

"Yes, Mortimer is the eastern prep-school boxing champion and the pater wants to meet him."

"Ow!"

"What did you say?" she asked dreamily.

"Nothing," Georgie growled. "My jaw cracked!"

BEAUMONT RESIDENTS VISIT IN CAMERON

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Henry of Beaumont were in Cameron last Friday visiting with Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Blaylock before returning home.

With them were Mrs. O. Whitaker of Beaumont and Mrs. A. W. Dycus of Port Arthur. They came to this section to attend the funeral of Mrs. G. H. Prideaux held at Lott on Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. Henry are well known in Cameron and their friends are always glad to have them visit here.

Mrs. Henry was the former Miss Mae Newman of Branchville and Mrs. Whitaker was the former Miss Tillie Newman of Branchville. Their father was the late G. W. Newman, an old settler in that section of the county. Mrs. Dycus is the daughter of William Needham who lived in Cameron and was with the local ice plant. He also operated gin plants here and at Gause. Old friends will recall these relations of other days and remember Mr. and Mrs. Henry for their visit which recalls many happy associations in Cameron.

Mrs. Prideaux died in Fort Worth. Her husband the late Dr. Prideaux was a large planter in Falls county. He died in 1898. While in Lott they were guests of Mrs. Moore. In Cameron Mrs. Whitaker and Mrs. Dycus visited Mrs. C. P. Wilkerson who is a cousin of Mrs. Dycus.

Mrs. Henry is a cousin of Mrs. L. L. Blaylock in Cameron. They will read the Herald at their Beaumont home during the next two years.

Convention Speaker

DR. R. E. JACKSON

Dr. R. E. (Prof.) Jackson, faculty member of Texas State College for Women (C.I.A.) will be the principal speaker at the all-service club luncheon of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce convention in Henderson April 21-23. In a biographical sketch supplied by Prof. Jackson he declares his father and mother came to Texas from Arkansas, traveled all over the East Texas oil field and fine black lands of central Texas, then settled on the poorest land they could find in Hood County. "We have two children, a boy and a girl, that I have never struck except in self-defense," he declares, and adds "The late Dr. F. M. Bralley hired me to teach in C. I. A. sixteen years ago and it is still the best job I can find. I am doing the best I can in following the paths of least resistance." Prof. Jackson is recognized as one of the ablest after-dinner speakers of the state. The all-service club luncheon will be held Tuesday April 23, with attendance credit being given to all home clubs in East Texas.

Freak Storm Does Damage At Sharpe

ASH WEDNESDAY

plainly that the Passion, Calvary, and the Cross are about to become the absorbing thoughts of the church until Easter.

The week beginning on Palm Sunday and ending on Holy Saturday bears various names. It is first called the "Great Week." There are two great weeks in the history of the world: One when God created the Universe, the other when God repaired His work, created it in a manner again, purified it, brought it back to its early sanctity by the blood and death of His Son. It is also called "Painful Week," because of the suffering of our Saviour.

On Palm Sunday the church honors the triumphant entry of the Saviour into Jerusalem. As Christ the Saviour entered Jerusalem, a countless multitude gathered out to meet Him, bearing palm branches in their hands and filling the air with their acclamations: "Hosana to the Son of David; Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord."

Before Mass in the Catholic church on Palm Sunday, the palms are blessed, and wherever possible a procession is held. This procession is commemorative of our Lord's triumphant entry into the city of Jerusalem. Two sentiments should predominate the Christian's soul on Palm Sunday: Joy on beholding the Saviour's triumph and considering our own future reward when we shall enter into the Heavenly Jerusalem with Him; and sorrow on thinking that the same Jews who greeted Him on Palm Sunday would five days later make the streets of Jerusalem resound with death cries. Christians are asked on Palm Sunday to carry the blessed palms to their homes and keep them there with great respect, and regard them as preservatives against spiritual and corporal evils. On Holy Monday Tuesday and Wednesday the church continues to remind us of various events that went before the Saviour's Passover.

Holy Thursday is consecrated to honoring the institution of the August Eucharist.

Good Friday! At this name the Christian heart stands still. A shudder passes over you and your imagination takes flight in spite of you to the summit of Calvary. Since the consummation of the atrocity of Calvary, the church has every year celebrated Good Friday in tears at all points of the world. The mournful tragedy commemorated on Good Friday is one to be meditated upon in silence. It is a day of great mourning of great rejoicing. It is a day of mourning because on this day the innocent Lamb of God is slain. Christ, our Pasch is sacrificed. It is also a day of great rejoicing because Good Friday commemorates the redemption of the human race.

It was sin that nailed Christ to the Cross, and today the world is drifting more and more into forgetfulness of what sin really is. Sin is becoming more and more an offense against society rather than an offense against God, a breach of good manners rather than a breach of good morals, an infringement of the acknowledged civilities of life rather than a violation of the Ten Commandments. Nations today have become blind to the things of eternity, deaf to the voice of God, and are as a consequence afflicted by the cancer of social unrest, so that unless Christ's policy be adopted, the policy of statesmen will fall to the ground.

It would be well then on Good Friday afternoon for our world, political, social and economic to stop and think of that Saviour whose death we commemorate. During the hours of 12 and 3 on Good Friday afternoon it would be a wonderful exemplification of Christianity, if our business places would close their doors as a proof of their love for the crucified Saviour, and as a consecrated effort to destroy the paganistic tendencies of the present day.
